

6 RESUME TIPS FOR EDUCATORS

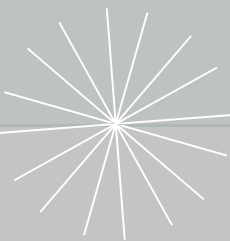

HIGHLIGHT YOUR RELEVANT EDUCATION AND CERTIFICATIONS

You will first want to confirm what the educational requirements for your district, city, and state are—you'll likely find these listed in the job description, but if not, a quick Google search should do the trick. If you meet the minimum requirements, be sure to include all the relevant details on your resume.

WRITE FOR THE JOB YOU WANT

While it can be tempting to go into great detail about all of your experience and accomplishments, it's important to remember that your resume is meant to convey the ways in which you're qualified for the specific job you've applied to.

FEATURE YOUR GOLD STAR-WORTHY ACHIEVEMENTS

In addition to showcasing your relevant responsibilities from past jobs, it's also important to highlight your accomplishments. This can serve to paint a fuller picture of who you are as an educator while helping recruiters and hiring managers better understand what you'd bring to their classroom. Use data to bring your resume to life.

CALL OUT TECHNICAL PROFICIENCIES

Don't forget to detail your tech skills as hiring managers will be scanning your resume to quickly determine whether you have the proficiencies they're looking for.

DON'T SHY AWAY FROM THE THINGS THAT MAKE YOU UNIQUE

There's no need to exclude potentially relevant or interesting past experiences from your resume—even if they aren't directly related to teaching. The same goes for compelling teaching or licensing experiences, like completing an urban education program or landing a teaching fellowship.
